A Message from our CEO

Dear Partner,

I'm proud to share our annual report for fiscal year 2022, which highlights the extraordinary work of my GFN colleagues and member food banks across the Network.

During the period this annual report covers, we saw destabilizing global events, most notably the war in Ukraine, which has compounded the ongoing effects of the COVID-19 pandemic. This has led to what the United Nations is calling a “cost-of-living crisis,” and the highest food prices seen in at least a decade.

We know that people already living in vulnerable situations are affected most by these events. And like in past times of crisis, we saw food banks step up to meet the surging demand for emergency food assistance. Food banks across the globe connected millions of people facing hunger to safe, nutritious food—reemphasizing how integral food banks are to healthy, functional food systems.

In 2022, GFN food bank members in 44 countries overcame disruptions in supply chains and served 39 million people, a 128-percent increase over pre-COVID levels of service. More than three-fourths of people served live in emerging and developing market economies.

We know that the coming year will continue to present serious challenges, but I'm confident that GFN and the Network of strong, innovative food banks will continue to meet those challenges by transforming our food systems and building resilient communities. Thank you for your support of this important work. Your partnership continues to inspire us and drive our efforts.

Best regards,

LISA MOON
PRESIDENT AND CEO

Mission & Vision

OUR MISSION

To nourish the world's hungry through uniting and advancing food banks.

OUR VISION

A world free of hunger.

Our Impact

FY2022 closes out the ambitious three-year strategy we launched in 2019.

This plan set out our North Star goal of food banks serving 50 million people facing hunger by 2030, a goal that continues to center our work. The FY2020-2022 strategic plan focused on three key areas: expanding food relief, strengthening food banks, and partnering to address the root causes of hunger and food loss and waste.

When we set our three-year strategy, we could not have anticipated the challenges the world, and the Network, were about to encounter—challenges that have influenced and shaped the way we operate and increased the demand for food bank services.

In the face of the COVID-19 pandemic and spiking global food prices, GFN member food banks have remained steadfast in their commitment to serving their communities. We celebrate the end of this three-year period with a GFN that is stronger and larger, but our dedication to our mission and vision is unchanged.

EXPANDING FOOD RELIEF

In FY2022, GFN member food banks served 128 percent more people than in pre-COVID times.

Food bank impact is evidenced through the huge network of community service organizations that they strengthen, like food pantries, soup kitchens, homeless shelters, and afterschool programs.

Food banks distributed the equivalent of more than 2 billion meals. Of note, fruits and vegetables were the most commonly distributed products.

STRENGTHENING FOOD BANKS

Our organization derives its strength from individual food bank members; to make sure we're providing the most relevant and useful services to support their aspirations, we rely on continual feedback. One way we evaluate our efforts to strengthen food banks is through our annual member satisfaction survey. The feedback that we glean from this annual examination is critical to the future of the Network and better shapes our vision and strategy.

PARTNERING TO ADDRESS THE ROOT CAUSES OF HUNGER AND FOOD LOSS AND WASTE

To support food banks in sourcing nutritious food and grocery products, and ultimately reduce food loss and waste, we committed to building more partnerships with multinational and regionally based businesses across the supply chain, from farms to retail and food service outlets. Our growing product sourcing team led this work in FY2022.

“General Mills is proud to have partnered for over 15 years with The Global FoodBanking Network. We believe deeply in the power of food banks to alleviate hunger while reducing food waste. Our Work in FY2022

Throughout the challenges of FY2022, dedicated staff at GFN ensured that food banks had the resources to operate, expand, and respond to emergencies through specialized technical assistance, increased funding, and enhanced knowledge sharing. Here are some of the ways we supported food banks this year.

STRATEGIC GRANTMAKING: WHAT WE'VE LEARNED

In response to COVID-19, GFN dramatically expanded grantmaking initiatives to support food banks. This included investments in food storage, cold chain supplies, food procurement, staffing, emergency response funding, and various other resources. Through our strategic grants program, we have built reputable partnerships with major donors, resulting in multi-year commitments to help food banks grow and sustain for the future.

Using funding from GFN, Scholars of Sustenance Thailand (SOS) expanded food recovery efforts and scaled service delivery in Bangkok, Phuket, and Hua Hin, through partnerships with local retailers and the addition of a refrigerated truck. In November 2021, SOS used GFN grant money to launch their first operations in the northern region of Chiang Mai, partnering with five new agencies to support efforts in that community.

In FY2022, Foodbank Việt Nam (FBVN) provided services in new, high-need areas, including Dong Nai and Ben Tre provinces, and increased coverage in Ho Chi Minh province, thanks to GFN grants. FBVN used the financial support from GFN to increase cold storage in their existing facility and build “miniature” warehouses throughout the region.

FOODBANK VIỆT NAM

KNOWLEDGE SHARING: POWERING COMMUNITIES FOR ZERO HUNGER

Throughout FY2022, we continued to support food banks as they addressed the challenges of supply chain fractures, decreased food donation, surges in demand for food assistance, and spikes in food prices, using well-established knowledge sharing platforms like the Food Bank Leadership Institute, the regionally specific Incubator Programs, and the newest platform, the Latin American Knowledge Networks.

During a Knowledge Exchange experience hosted at Leket Israel, GFN staff members Marta Hodgkins-Sumner and Ahlea Isabella and GFN member food bank founders Jomar Fleras (RAHP), John Gothangu (FBK), and Elijah Amoo Addo (FFAA) toured Leket Israel's robust logistics center. The Knowledge Exchange provided an in-depth look at Leket's agricultural recovery program. (Photo: The Global FoodBanking Network)

As international COVID-19 restrictions eased in the second half of FY2022, GFN staff began to take the opportunity to safely visit member food banks again, providing in-person technical assistance in areas like food safety, logistics, and financial management.

EMERGENCY RESPONSE: FOOD BANKS IN A TIME OF CRISIS

The invasion of Ukraine by Russia in late February 2022 forced millions of people from their homes, leaving them with little reliable access to food. The ripple effects of the conflict have been felt across the globe. Many countries, especially in Africa, rely on wheat, fertilizer, and other commodities from Ukraine and Russia but are now facing shortages because of the war. And food prices reached their highest in a decade shortly after the invasion, exacerbating the toll of the pandemic on people in vulnerable situations and leading to the greatest cost-of-living crisis in a generation.

raised to support Ukraine emergency response in Europe

GFN and member food banks responded to this crisis rapidly and efficiently. In partnership with the European Food Banks Federation (FEBA), we created an emergency response fund that supported the food banks in and around Ukraine, which provided crucial emergency food assistance, and we continue to partner with FEBA and food banks in the region in their ongoing response.

PARTNERSHIPS: REDUCING FOOD LOSS AND WASTE TO MITIGATE CLIMATE CHANGE

In FY2022, GFN and member food banks strengthened and forged new partnerships to recover more surplus food and diminish the impact of food loss and waste. We released six research briefs in partnership with the Harvard Law School Food Law and Policy Clinic for the Global Food Donation Policy Atlas to identify opportunities to improve food donation, and we also promoted the work of voluntary agreements with several partners.

Food banks like Bancos de Alimentos de México are playing a leading role in voluntary agreements like Pacto por la Comida, which brings together 18 other stakeholders to halve food loss and waste in Mexico by 2030. And as GFN staff capacity has grown in the past year, we've engaged more product donors and partners to direct more surplus food through the Network.

“Our partnership with The Global FoodBanking Network is a winning one. We have learned so much and benefited from the training, support, and capacity building given by the dedicated team. In addition, with GFN financial support, we have been able to strengthen our structure by recruiting permanent staff and acquiring equipment to improve our operations. GFN’s assistance and involvement also ensures our credibility with national, and international donors.”

A Look Forward: The Future of Food Banks within Food Systems

COVID-19. The invasion of Ukraine. Skyrocketing food prices. We are operating in uncertain territory as we face a mounting global hunger and cost-of-living crisis that shows no signs of ending soon.

But food banks remain a time-tested means for hunger relief.

The close of FY2022 saw the end of our three-year strategy, and the launch of our new four-year strategy, which will run from FY2023-2026. This plan will help us move even closer to our North Star goal by building member resilience and effectiveness, expanding our reach and depth in emerging and developing markets, and leveraging the food bank model to improve food systems.

As the past few years have demonstrated, despite the best planning, some challenges are impossible to anticipate. However, we have also seen that our food bank Network is robust and adaptable, perhaps all the more so due to these unanticipated challenges.

We believe more firmly than ever that locally led; community-based food banks are key to sustainable food systems that are equipped to meet the challenges that lie ahead. To our supporters and partners—thank you. Your engagement is crucial to building a world where everyone can consistently access nutritious food.

“As sustainable food systems are vital to end hunger; food banks play an essential role in the sustainability of those food systems. Hunger and malnutrition are barriers to sustainable development; hungry and malnourished individuals are less productive and are more likely to suffer from chronic diseases.
